A short ferry ride from metropolitan Seattle leads to the tranquil beauty of the Kitsap Peninsula. Every town is located on Puget Sound or the Hood Canal so nearly all our accommodations, dining and recreational activities showcase our picturesque 236-mile shoreline.

There are a variety of seafaring options to get to the peninsula. Regular state ferry service runs between Edmonds and Kingston; Seattle to the artist communities on Bainbridge Island; Seattle into the heart of downtown Bremerton; or West Seattle's Fauntleroy will glide you past historic Tillicum Village, on Kitsap's Blake Island, to the Southworth landing near Port Orchard.

You can also drive onto the peninsula over the Tacoma Narrows Bridge (be sure to plan a stop by the famous Point Defiance Zoo & Aquarium) and on through charming Gig Harbor.

No matter how you arrive, you will be greeted by warm and friendly communities, scenic drives, outdoor recreation and waterfront parks galore. You'll be fascinated by Bremerton's naval history and captivated by the bustling Nordic community of Poulsbo. Silverdale has all the latest gifts and fashions to satisfy the most ardent shopping bug. Remnants of the area's rich logging history are evident everywhere - especially in quaint Port Gamble, the site of the original Pope and Talbot lumber mill. You'll gain an appreciation for the contributions of the native culture and Chief Sealth by visiting the internationally acclaimed Suquamish Museum.

The gravesite of Chief Sealth (top left) is located near the Suquamish Museum. Salmon, prepared in a centuries old tradition combined with tribal stories and dances can often be enjoyed throughout the region. Call the Kitsap Peninsula Visitors Bureau, 360-297-8200 for details.

◆ NATIVE INHABITANTS

For thousands of years before European explorers charted the waters of Puget Sound, several large tribes of native people, the Suquamish, S'Klallam, Chemakum, Skokomish and Toanhoosh, inhabited this area.

On the shores of Agate Pass, is a small site called Old Man House State Park. If you want to trace the history of the Kitsap Peninsula — this is an excellent place to begin your journey. While the need to hunt and gather spread the Suquamish people throughout the region, archeological evidence indicates that for nearly 2,000 years, several tribes gathered at this spot for trade, ceremonies and celebration.

As you stand overlooking the site, imagine children running and playing on the beach while men in dugout canoes are spearing fish for food and barter. Women are working on the beach, some harvesting clams and other shellfish with sticks while others are weaving intricate baskets, mats and clothing from softened cedar bark.

Among the children playing there on the beach is a young man destined to become a great chief. He is learning lessons from elders who have learned these same traditions from their elders for thousands of years.

Yet, in his lifetime, he will witness the arrival of Captain George Vancouver's ship Discovery in 1792. He will become friends with a man from Olympia — one Doc Maynard — and will convince him of the opportunities to be found further north in a small city across the bay from his ancestral home. Then, in 1854, he will be a prime participant in a treaty which he sadly realizes will mark the end of his culture as he knows it.

Just a few miles from where you are now standing — up near the Suquamish Elementary School where children of his ancestors still run and play — is this great Chief's grave site. It sits on a hillside at St. Peter's Mission overlooking Puget Sound and the city bearing his name — Seattle.

From Chief Sealth's (pronounced See-elth) grave, you can follow signs to the Suquamish Museum. This internationally acclaimed museum has been rated by the Smithsonian Institute as the best historical museum of Native Americans in the Pacific Northwest.

Both the Suquamish and the S'Klallam tribes operate gaming establishments which have provided a much needed boost to their tribal economies.

◆ VANCOUVER EXPEDITION

The most famous and well-documented European expedition into Puget Sound waters occurred in 1792, when English Captain George Vancouver sailed his ship Discovery into Puget Sound. Vancouver charted the waters and is responsible for naming many of Western Washington's landmarks, among them Puget Sound, Hood Canal, perspective

Mt. Baker, Port Orchard, Port Townsend, Dungeness Bay and Discovery Bay, to honor members of his crew and ship.

◆ LOGGING INDUSTRY TAKES HOLD

During the years between 1849 and 1851, San Francisco burned to the ground six times. While most of the city was devastated, Pope and Talbot prospered — supplying lumber for the rebuilding effort. In an effort to secure a stable, cost-effective inventory of lumber, the men decided to head to Puget Sound where they had heard stories of tall stands of timber.

They explored several options until they finally found a site at Teekalet (Port Gamble) which suited their needs perfectly. The Pope & Talbot dynasty was born. While every peninsula mill town—Seabeck, Camp Union, Port Madison, Port Orchard and Port Blakely—has remnants of their logging history, the most well-preserved community is the Pope & Talbot mill town at Port Gamble. The original mill closed in 1995 but many of the homes and buildings from the Victorian-era still stand and are beautifully maintained. The General Store and Cafe shares the building with the Historic Museum which features exhibits of the area's heyday. The Kitsap Peninsula Visitor & Convention Bureau is just up the block to help you plan your Kitsap experience.

◆ MOSQUITO FLEET PROVIDES TRANSPORT

With dense forests and few roads through them, the water remained the most efficient method of transportation around the Peninsula for many years. One of the most famous ferry services was called the Mosquito Fleet.

Much like the name implies, this fleet of small steam vessels flitted about the Sound providing a link between the Peninsula's communities and Seattle/Tacoma throughout the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

Located on the Bremerton waterfront, the USS Turner Joy is open to the public.

◆ THE U.S. NAVY COMES TO TOWN

The Army Corp of Engineers visited Puget Sound in 1867 and recognized the strategic significance of the region. However, it wasn't until after Washington attained statehood in 1889, that Bremerton was selected as being ideally suited for a naval base due to its location on a deep water port, an adequate supply of raw materials and a skilled labor force. Puget Sound Naval Shipyard was born!

There are several unique opportunities for visitors to get a closer look at naval activity. In Bremerton, you can go on a self-guided tour of the Viet Nam-era destroyer USS Turner Joy which is docked at Waterfront Park or take the foot ferry to Port Orchard for a picturesque 50-minute narrated tour of the Bremerton and Port Orchard waterfront (Kitsap Harbor Tours).

In Keyport, the wonders of the deep blue sea are explored at the Naval Undersea Museum which traces the history of deep sea exploration, submarines, and torpedo warfare.

"Just far enough to get away" has been adopted as the Kitsap Peninsula Visitor & Convention Bureau slogan to represent this beautiful area of the state — and for good reason. A marine highway transports you from metropolitan Seattle to a world of small, wonderfully independent towns that dot the 236-miles of western Puget Sound and Hood Canal shoreline. Here you'll find limitless opportunities for family fun, thriving arts communities, and no less than five of the state's finest golf courses.

Day Drives

The combination of Native American, Scandinavian, military and pioneer attractions all within a two-hour radius make Kitsap an easy-to-tour destination rich in history and diversity. Along with the spectacular natural beauty, an eclectic collection of communities, and abundant outdoor activities – Kitsap has it all!

Want to explore more of the Pacific Northwest? Stay with us as you tour the rest of Western Washington, all easily accessible from our central and affordable location!

◆ KITSAP'S DIVERSE HISTORY

Begin tracing Kitsap's roots at the lumber mill town of Port Gamble, established in 1853 and built to resemble the founders hometown in Maine.

DIRECTIONS: Follow Highway 104 to Miller Bay Road, wind through the forest to Suquamish where you can visit the gravesite of Chief Seattle at historic St. Peter's Mission. After a stop at the site of the Old Man House State Park on Agate Pass, continue to the nationally acclaimed Suquamish Tribal Museum just off Highway 305 before enjoying the shops and flavor of the Norwegian-settled town of Poulsbo.

The Naval Undersea Museum at Keyport on Highway 308 rewards visitors with a complete history of submarines and torpedoes. At the Bremerton Boardwalk, go aboard the USS Turner Joy, a Viet Nam era destroyer. Just a block up the hill is the exciting Bremerton Naval Museum. Then walk over and check out general local history at the Kitsap County Historical Museum. A stop at Port Orchard's Log Cabin Museum and a shoreline cruise of the Puget Sound Naval Shipyard aboard Kitsap Harbor Tours will enhance your knowledge of the history of the Kitsap Peninsula.

◆ HOOD CANAL LOOP

This scenic trip takes you along the shores of Hood Canal through rain forests and charming waterfront communities. There are great views of the snow-capped Olympics and ample recreational opportunities, including championship golf and world-class resorts.

DIRECTIONS: From Bainbridge Island or Kingston, follow the signs to the Hood Canal Bridge—the longest floating bridge over tidal water in the world. Cross the bridge near Port Gamble and make your first stop the resort community of Port Ludlow. Stop by the Port Ludlow Resort for a round of golf or a bite of Northwest cuisine. Then continue to Highway 101 which follows the west bank of the canal through Brinnon, Hoodsport and Potlatch at the bottom of the hook. This is a popular destination for scuba diving enthusiasts. Then take Highway 106 east to Union and Belfair. Don't miss the Alderbrook

AUDREY FRAGGALOSCH

Sunset over Hood Canal

Resort. This beautiful 525 acre resort has waterfront guest rooms/cottages and dining as well as a championship golf course. From here, you can continue back to Bremerton, or follow the hook to Tahuya, DeWatto and Seabeck.

◆ SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE

If you're a visitor with varied needs and interests, Kitsap has just what you're looking for! Start with antique shopping in Port Orchard or a stop at the famous Springhouse Dolls and Gifts. The Kitsap Mall at Silverdale houses five major department stores and myriad specialty shops. At Silverdale Waterfront Park, have fun at the great children's playground, picnic area, boat dock and launch ramp or head to the new skate park at the north end of town.

Stroll through Anderson Parkway on the Poulsbo waterfront; visit the Poulsbo Marine Science Center and experience the touch tank of sea life from Liberty Bay. Then rent a kayak and see Poulsbo from a seal's-eye-view. Friday and Saturday evenings you can sample Norwegian dinners at Shelia's Bay Cafe on the Poulsbo waterfront and on Wednesday, enjoy lunch served at the Sons of Norway.

A short drive down Highway 305 will take you over the breathtaking Agate Pass Bridge to Bainbridge Island where you can visit the beautiful Bainbridge Gardens, then take your picnic lunch to the lovely grounds of Bainbridge Island Vineyard and Winery.

Kitsap Peninsula has everything including mountain and water views wherever you look; parks and boat launches every few miles; every type of restaurant you can think of and the most affordable lodging around.
